

Dear Members of our NFI Community,

Around the world there is a quest for racial justice and human rights. Peaceful protests and riots are happening during this time of the overwhelming coronavirus pandemic (COVID-19). The NFI speaks out as a “voice” for the vulnerable. The NFI and NIDCAP offer clarity about the value of the human experience. All interactions and care should happen with respect and understanding for babies and their families, and for one another, from all races, ethnicities and geographies.

Now many months into this COVID-19 outbreak, we are grappling with understanding how to make sense of this experience, personally and professionally. With challenges to connect and to nurture our relationships there are also opportunities for growth and new ways of being. This idea of “challenges creating opportunities” is intrinsic to the Synactive Theory (of Newborn Behavioral Organization and Development). Opportunities for the NFI exist all around us as we adapt ways to be present, supportive and helpful. 2020 is definitely becoming a year to reflect, reset, recommit, refashion and renew our commitment and capacities for the NFI, NIDCAP and one another.

Connection & Relationships.

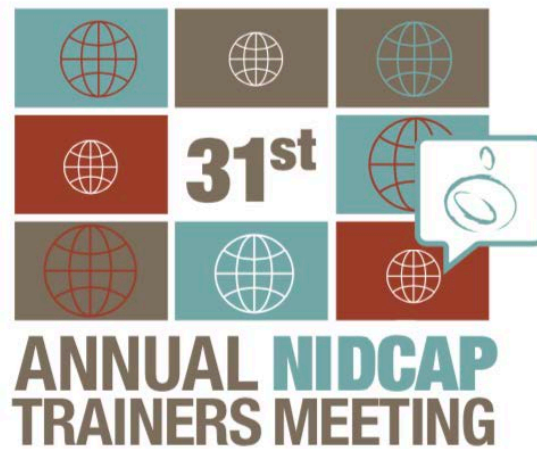

Last month, Joy Browne created an opportunity for us to participate in a Masayang Pulong (“happy meeting”) flash mob. Members joined a Zoom call to share stories, updates and support with one another.

Growth.

The NFI Board of Directors described ways their work has changed and/or expanded during this time of COVID-19:

The Program and Advancement Committees are creating online resources to introduce NIDCAP and support training efforts. The Annual NIDCAP Trainers Meeting Planning Committee is working to reimagine our annual meeting using video conferencing to virtually capture aspects that are unique and cherished by meeting participants each year.

The logo features a 3x3 grid of squares in teal, brown, and red, each containing a white globe icon. The center square is replaced by the text '31st'. To the right of the grid is a white speech bubble containing a globe icon. Below the grid, the text 'ANNUAL NIDCAP TRAINERS MEETING' is written in a bold, sans-serif font, with 'NIDCAP' in teal and the other words in brown.

31st ANNUAL NIDCAP TRAINERS MEETING

This is an extraordinarily challenging time. Yet as an organization, the NFI is working to strengthen its capacities. We will explore, experiment and evolve. We will continue to strive to support and nurture one another, our organization, our model and our work. We will build into our new ways of being in the world connection, compassion and inspiration. We are so very fortunate for your NFI participation in being an integral part of how we evolve.

Let's work together to tell the story of what makes NIDCAP unique and critical to the hospital care of newborns and infants and their families.
