

I am a parent of a preterm infant, the founder of the collaborative multi-stakeholder, multi-disciplinary platform, The Irish Neonatal Health Alliance (www.inha.ie) and a EUPATI Fellow and Tutor.

I specialize in the areas of Advocacy, Education and Research. My accomplishments in the field include collaborating on several neonatal and pediatric health system reviews and clinical audits, reviewing obstetric, neonatal and bereavement clinical guidelines, developing and delivering curricula and continued education for medical, nursing, allied health professional and patient expert students.

I mentor PhD students, serve on the advisory board of the PPI Ignite Network, the National Office Of Clinical Audit and have worked as patient collaborator and embedded patient researcher on over 70 national and international research studies including developing several Core Outcome Sets.

I am a chair committee member of group that developed the European Standards of Care For Newborn Health, a funding reviewer for the Irish Health Research Board and the British Medical Journal Open Pediatrics and am a member of the National Office of Research Ethics Clinical Trials Committee. I work with the National Clinical Trials Office Stakeholder and Management Committee, the EMA, the National Office For Clinical Audit and the Health Products Regulatory Authority of Ireland and have published papers in several peer reviewed journals.

I have proudly served on the board of the NIDCAP Federation International since 2012 in addition to holding roles on the Advancement Committee and Family Advisory Council. NIDCAP is woven into every facet of my work in Ireland and internationally and I look forward to continuing to raise awareness globally and work towards a world where every infant receives NIDCAP care.
